(2)In (), we were on the last day of a five-day tour traveling around northern Italy. We were going to leave that wonderful country for the U.S. the next day. We really wanted to see this wonderful town with our own eyes.

The morning was beautiful, and we enjoyed the car ride like happy *pilgrims. On the way there, I read some stories of St. Francis to my children. I *wondered, "Did my children understand the stories?" (3)I was not sure about that. But I could keep them quiet in the car. We enjoyed beautiful churches and museums in Assisi.

But by the end of the hot day, (4)_____ . One was *throwing up, and the other was having *diarrhea. We were all *irritable and tired, and we had a three-hour trip to get back to Florence. *Somewhere on the Perugia Plains, we stopped at a *trattoria to rest. We wondered, "Will they let us sit in with *smelly and *noisy children?" We *timidly walked into the *dining room and hoped that we could *silence the children and have something (5)to eat there.

The owner of the trattoria came out of the kitchen, looked at us, said, "You wait here," and went back to the kitchen. We thought perhaps we should leave soon, but (6)before (decide / what / do / we / to / could), he came back with his wife and a *teenage daughter. They walked across the dining room, smiled at us, opened their arms, and cried, "Ah, *bambini!" They took the children from our arms and told us to sit at a quiet *corner table. While my husband and I were enjoying our dinner, they took care (7)() them. The daughter held my younger child in her arms and *sang him to sleep in *gentle Italian. The mother gave ice cream to the older one. The owner even said that we could stay with them for the night if we (8)wanted to. They showed us their *hospitality.

We were in big trouble. Any parent who (9)is cornered by little children can *relate to our experience in a foreign country far away from home. I believe that God sent us *angels that day.
